Scheme of Delegation to the Parish Clerk

Introduction

The Proper Officer referred to in legislation is normally the chief officer to a local (parish, community, neighbourhood, town) council and is sometimes referred to as the clerk.

Many clerks are also the council's Responsible Financial Officer (RFO). The role of chief officer or clerk to a local council is a recognised profession. The range of work undertaken in this role is diverse but all local councils operate within the same legal, financial and procedural framework and share the same purpose of democratically representing a local community. Differences depend on the size of the community served by the council and its level of its activity.

Values

A clerk is a valuable investment for the local council, especially where that officer is trained and qualified specifically to undertake the work of the council. However, the clerk is valued for many attributes in addition to qualifications.

Three overarching values are resourcefulness, objectivity and integrity

Resourcefulness

Clerks respond to questions and problems with a dynamic, 'can-do' attitude. They readily take the initiative and approach their work with enthusiasm, common sense and a vision for the future of the council and its community. Clerks are both resilient and flexible in the face of difficulty and are willing to adapt to changing circumstances. When presented with a question to address or a problem to solve, they are keen investigators who know where to go for advice, information and ideas.

Objectivity

Clerks maintain a professional detachment from specific views expressed by individual members of the council or in the community. They respect the legal framework and democratic processes within which councils operate and advise the council accordingly. The council can rely on a clerk's discretion and neutrality, independent assessments of problems and solutions and on their professional, objective advice.

3 Integrity

Many characteristics contribute to the integrity and inherent strength of clerks. They are reliable, committed and consistent in their work; they are honest, open and worthy of trust; they support their employer (the council as a corporate body). They are approachable, diplomatic and sensitive to the needs of others; they treat people fairly, equally and with respect for diversity. They are committed to their own and the council's excellence and are willing to pursue personal and professional development to underpin confidence in their actions. They take responsibility for their work and are accountable for their advice and the decisions they take

4 The standards

The standards represent what an experienced /qualified clerk should be able to do in performing their role. In order to be qualified all clerks should reach all these standards at each of the three specified levels although it is appreciated that some clerks will not perform all these activities in the course of their work. Many of these standards involve giving advice, ensuring compliance with the law, managing a variety of tasks and supporting the council. In each case, the standard implies the knowledge, understanding and skills which the clerk develops over time gradually building up their qualifications, their continuing professional development (CPD) and their experience of the workplace.
